

Pension Analyst

Compliance Bulletin

November 2009

IRS further extends effective date of normal retirement age regulations for governmental plans

In 2007, the IRS published final regulations confirming that pension plans may make payments to participants who have reached normal retirement age and have not separated from service with the employer. These regulations also provided guidance on how low a plan's normal retirement age may be and established age 62 as a safe harbor normal retirement age. Under these final rules, a plan's normal retirement age may not be earlier than the earliest age that is reasonably representative of the typical retirement age for the industry in which the covered workforce is employed. Nevertheless, a normal retirement age of 62 or later is always acceptable.

However, if substantially all the participants in the plan are qualified public safety employees, a normal retirement age of 50 or later will satisfy these new regulations. A "qualified public safety employee" is any employee of a State or political subdivision who provides: police protection, firefighting services, or emergency medical services within the jurisdiction of that State or political subdivision.

Later that year, the IRS published additional guidance clarifying that plans may not provide normal retirement ages that are conditioned (directly or indirectly) on the completion of a stated number of years of service. The IRS believes that a normal retirement age that changes to an earlier date upon completion of a stated number of years of service violates the ERISA vesting or accrual rules.

However, the IRS did recognize that governmental and certain other plans are not subject to the ERISA vesting and benefit accrual requirements. As a result, they requested comments from sponsors of these non-ERISA plans regarding the appropriateness of service-based normal retirement ages with respect to the pre-ERISA vesting rules.

For governmental plans, the final regulations were originally scheduled to take effect for plan years beginning on or after January 1, 2009. However, in late 2008, the IRS published guidance delaying the effective date for governmental plans to plan years beginning on or after January 1, 2011.

Additional delayed effective date for governmental plans

The IRS recently published Notice 2009-86, which further delays the effective date for governmental plans to plan years beginning on or after January 1, 2013. This extension will provide the IRS with additional time to consider comments received with respect to the effect of the normal retirement regulations on governmental plans.

Next steps

Plan sponsors should review their plan documents to determine if their plan's current definition of normal retirement age complies with the new IRS regulations. If a plan amendment is required and Prudential Retirement provides document services for your plan, we will work with you to ensure that your plan complies with the extended amendment deadline. If you have any questions regarding the guidance discussed in this Compliance Bulletin, please contact your Prudential Retirement representative.

your Rock for Retirement®

Prudential

The Pension Analyst is published by Prudential Retirement, a Prudential Financial business, to provide clients with information on current legislation and regulatory developments affecting qualified retirement plans. This publication is distributed with the understanding that Prudential Retirement is not rendering legal advice. Plan sponsors should consult their attorneys about the application of any law to their retirement plans.

©2009, The Prudential Insurance Company of America, all rights reserved.

Prudential Retirement, Prudential Financial, PRU, Prudential and the Rock logo are registered service marks of The Prudential Insurance Company of America, Newark, NJ and its affiliates.